Roamly Groups Go-To-Market Plan

One shared plan for extended-family trips, from coordination to a booked experience, inside Roamly.

Hybrid PLG + CLG

Goal: Retain

Segment: extended families

Kamelia Koleva · Product School GTM Certification

Win the organizer, not the whole group

SEGMENT

- Extended family trips: multiple households, grandparents to cousins
- Each household pays its own share, unevenly
- Recurs around reunions and holidays

MOTION & GOAL

- Hybrid: PLG primary (invite inside a trip, fast time-to-value)
- CLG secondary: families recommend it to other family groups
- Goal: Retain existing Roamly travelers hitting a wall

CHANNEL & METRIC

- Existing users with booking history and prior group drop-off
- Prompt directly: "planning a trip with others? try Groups"
- Metric: organizer repeat-organize rate, not full-group adoption

For Roamly's existing travelers who already coordinate group trips manually, Roamly Groups reduces the organizer's burden immediately, even if not everyone fully adopts it.

KEY MESSAGE 1

Less coordination, not perfect coordination.
Any adoption beats today's manual work.

KEY MESSAGE 2

You stay in control without doing it all manually: sync and split in one place, with fallback for holdouts.

KEY MESSAGE 3

Built for the trip you're already planning.

Coordination is free. Booking is the moat.

BATTLECARD · TRIPPROF

- Offer: all-in-one trip planner: itinerary, multi-currency splitting, checklists, documents, offline. No booking layer.
- Positioning: "A whole trip, not just the bill"; family-trip and reunion playbook
- Pricing: freemium + credits (€3.99/credit, Pro €7.99/mo); collaboration is paywalled
- Why the biggest threat: already owns the multi-household family framing and has a live monetization engine

THE INSIGHT

- TripProf wins by monetizing content, not transactions
- So coordination was never Roamly's moat
- Roamly's edge: free default coordination paired with a marketplace of vetted, bookable local experiences
- Biggest threat: if booking doesn't happen in the same flow, Groups is a free feature with nothing to show for it

THE BET

Roamly Groups wins by keeping the shared itinerary and the experience marketplace connected, not separate, so booking happens inside the plan the family is already coordinating in.

DEPRIORITIZING

Packing checklists, document storage, offline mode, general destination content. The itinerary stays: it is what connects coordination to a booking.

From plan to a booked experience

Roamly Groups is a shared trip planner for extended families, cutting the organizer's coordination work across households and turning the finished plan into a real experience booked through Roamly's marketplace of vetted local experts.

FOR

Existing Roamly travelers organizing a multi-household extended family trip

WE OFFER

One shared plan replacing separate accounts, spreadsheets and manual payment splitting

BECAUSE OF

Less coordination work for the organizer from day one, even if not every household fully adopts

WHO WANT

To coordinate and book as a group on Roamly without separate accounts or workarounds

DESPITE

Not matching the planning depth of legacy tools

BETTER THAN

Planning tools that only help you plan; Roamly turns the plan into a booked experience

Less overhead. One shared plan, no human relay switch.

Faster decisions. Conflicts surface early.

Bookable. The plan converts into reservations.

Trust. Vetted local experts are pre-screened.

One audience, one promise: the Organizer

FROM

A family that books on Roamly individually hits a wall together: separate bookings per household, chasing relatives for who's paying, manual date checks. The plan ends up in a spreadsheet or group chat.

TO

The same family plans and books together, as one group, inside Roamly, turning the plan into real booked experiences without leaving the product.

VALUE PROP

Less coordination work, from day one. Plan and book as one group without chasing every household.

CAPABILITIES

- Shared itinerary across households
- In-app split payments
- Synced availability
- Book real experiences from the plan

EVIDENCE

82% of organizers who tried Groups organized a second family trip within 4 months.

Illustrative figure for the exercise, not measured data.

IN-APP NOTIFICATION

"Planning a trip with the whole family? Get everyone's dates, payments, and preferences in one place."

EMAIL SUBJECT LINE

"Next time you're planning a trip with family, try this"

Planning is free. Booking carries a small fee.

MODEL & GOAL

- Transaction-based: small fee on the booking, shown as its own line at checkout
- Goal: more family groups planning and booking on Roamly; easy to try, easy to recommend
- Families travel once or twice a year, so no monthly charge

WHO PAYS

- Each household pays its share of the booking and of the fee, via split payments
- The organizer feels the value but doesn't carry the cost

PACKAGING · BY FEATURES

- Everything a normal trip needs is in the default package
- Booking is never blocked
- One optional extra for harder trips

GROUPS · DEFAULT

Shared plan, invites, split payments, synced dates, booking. Fee inside the booking, split across households. Route most families here.

GROUPS PLUS · OPTIONAL

For big or tricky trips, e.g. several generations with different needs. Extra planning help plus flexible booking if a household drops out. Paid on top, per trip.

VALIDATE · IN THIS ORDER

- Max-Diff: which features matter and are worth paying extra for (Plus ideas vs. default)
- Van Westendorp: acceptable range for the booking fee and the Plus price, by household size and generations

THE ONE THING THAT CHANGES EVERYTHING

That families who plan on Roamly will book on Roamly. Both revenue lines depend on it. If they plan here and book elsewhere, we earn nothing.

What this process taught me

FRICTION POINTS

- Positioning was the hardest to finalize. I kept writing features instead of what the family actually gets. More examples would have helped.
- Messaging has to change depending on the audience. It took me a while to see that.

AHA MOMENT

Positioning and messaging are two very different jobs. It's important to split them, but you need both.

KEY TAKEAWAYS

- Have a success metric that proves the bet. It makes everything more concrete, and you can tell if things are working or not.
- Follow the whole process. It helped a lot. After finishing one step, the next one is so much easier.

CLOSING

One shared plan. Booked inside Roamly.
